Pauline Pitt

Philanthropist Pauline Pitt proves that living graciously can lift the spirit and invigorate the soul. Renowned for her fresh, classic interiors, the Manhattan native became enamored of decorating in London during the early 1970s. After returning to New York, she launched her eponymous interior design firm, Pauline Boardman Ltd., and has created sophisticated abodes for clients like Terry Allen Kramer. Daughter of financier George F. Baker III, the Palm Beach doyenne has a soft spot for the island's rich architectural heritage and advocating for animals and the less fortunate. She currently serves on several boards, including Peggy Adams Animal Rescue League, and is chair of the Preservation Foundation of Palm Beach and the William H. Pitt Foundation. In her spare time, she enjoys playing tennis and unwinding with her family and her partner, Jerry Seay, at their rustic chalet in Aspen. —Kerry Shorr
